Observations on the Current Healthcare Environment

Mark S. Jacobs, MD, President, Texas Society of Psychiatric Physicians

Our healthcare system continues to evolve at an unprecedented rate, primarily driven by high costs and below average outcomes compared to the rest of the industrialized world. The U.S. spends far more per capita for healthcare than any other nation, yet ranks 46 of the top 48 developed economies in terms of efficiency, and our average life expectancy still lags behind 24 other nations. The math is inescapably and brutally clear. Healthcare costs have grown on average 2.4 percentage points faster than the GDP since 1970. With no end in sight, this gap is simply not sustainable and is exacerbated today by the uneven recovery in the broader U.S. economy. The Affordable Care Act was and is a major contributor to 'disruptive' change, but the process of reform in healthcare systems now has a momentum all its own.

Medicare will be reducing hospital reimbursement by an estimated $260 billion dollars over the ten-year period beginning in 2013, and most insurance plans link their rate schedules to Medicare. Commercial third party payers are facing increasing financial pressures related to mandated coverage, no pre-existing illness exclusion, no annual or lifetime maximum payment caps, and minimum medical loss ratios. They are also facing competition from hospital systems and provider groups who are developing their own 'insurance' products, and are adjusting to a greatly increased regulatory environment.

Payers are counting on increased collaboration or integration with providers to offer a high-quality, comprehensive, and coordinated healthcare product for their subscribers in order to manage costs and to build 'brand loyalty'. They expect physicians to utilize 'quality' measures, maintain an EHR and exchange data, and perhaps participate in risk- sharing arrangements. Insurers are clearly moving away from 'fee for service' to a 'pay for performance' model, and momentum is building for bundled payments to physician groups and comprehensive capitation contracts with integrated delivery systems and Accountable Care Organizations.

Employers are increasingly shifting medical costs to employees through higher deductibles and increased co-payments. Patients then begin operating more like true 'consumers', with heightened awareness of costs and how providers compare to one another in terms of outcomes or other quality measures.

The increased need for access to healthcare prompted by the ACA exacerbates an already problematic provider shortage. This may be particularly true in psychiatry, especially in non-urban settings. Most plans call for extensive use of physician extenders to deal with this shortage. Simple cases (think uncomplicated depression, ADHD) would more likely be managed in a primary care

Mark S. Jacobs, MD

Never a Dull Moment in Austin

Eric Woomer, Public Policy Consultant, Federation of Texas Psychiatry

here is a significant amount of legislative activity related psychiatry underway at the state capitol. Despite the fact that August is usually a slow time of year, the Federation is hard at work advancing the interests of psychiatrist in Texas.

After more than a decade, the Texas Department of State Health Services (DSHS) has finally adopted a new restraint and seclusion rule. The Federation twice provided written comments to the Department, and participated in several stakeholder meetings on the topic.

The new rule was particularly problematic as initially proposed, but DSHS modified the proposed rule to reflect the concerns of organized medicine in substantive ways. Perhaps the most significant alteration was that supine holes are still permissible within emergency departments. While there is a general prohibition on prone and supine restraints, these prohibitions generally apply only to psychiatric hospitals and to the mental health units of a general medical facility, and not in an emergency setting. The rule went into effect on July 23rd.

The Houston office of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) is relying on an interpretation of a federal law that is having a chilling immediate effect on Texas telepsychiatry. The Ryan Haight Act addresses the problem of Internet prescription drug diversions, and the law states that only a valid prescription for controlled substances may be dispensed by means of the Internet. The Houston DEA office treats a practitioner who prescribes medication following a telemedicine evaluation as covered under the Act. Generally, a practitioner is in violation of the Act if he or she does not perform at least one in-person assessment of a patient before prescribing medication.

The Act exempts practitioners from this requirement as long as they meet the federal definition of telemedicine, which permits a physician to prescribe controlled substances without an in-person evaluation if the patient is treated and physically located in a hospital or clinic with a valid DEA registration, and the practitioner is treating the patient in the usual course of professional practice, in accordance with state law, and with a valid DEA registration.

The Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) has pulled together a group of affected stakeholders and is coordinating a meeting with the DEA. The Federation is participating in these conversations, and we hope that we can resolve the situation in the very near future.

The Texas Drug Utilization Review Board (DUR) continues to try to expand prior authorization requirements for psychotropic medications to young children. Initial clinical edits were proposed in April, but after testimony from Dr. Steven Pliszka and others, the edit was pulled down to be reviewed and reworked.

The new edit retains the current prior authorization requirement for children under three, but creates a separate authorization tier for aripiprazole and risperidone. The Federation wrote multiple letters to the DUR Board and has participated in multiple meetings about this particular edit, as well as to suggest ways to give physicians a greater voice in proposed future. The Federation will keep you abreast of its progress on its efforts.

The Texas Sunset Commission continues its review of DSHS, the Texas Department of Family and Protective Services, and other HHSC enterprise agencies. The full commission reviewed staff recommendations and held a public hearing in July. The Federation met with each individual member of the Commission to provide our comments prior to the hearing. The full Commission is scheduled to hold its adoption hearing on August 13, where the members will modify staff recommendations and adopt suggestions for consideration by the full Legislature. Legislation for each individual agency will have to be considered and passed by the Legislature in order to continue the agencies functions.

HHSC itself is scheduled for Sunset staff review in the coming months. The Federation will review staff recommendations and prepare a position for the Sunset Commission's consideration prior to the hearing.

The Senate Health and Human Services committee is holding a hearing in Austin on August 15 to monitor the implementation of programs that were created or expanded by the last legislature to improve mental health and substance abuse services and assess these efforts contribution to improved outcomes. Specifically, the Committee will look at reduced recidivism in the state hospitals, diversions from emergency rooms and county jails, and access to permanent supportive housing. The Committee will also attempt to identify and address gaps in the current mental health and substance abuse system and make recommendations to the legislature to better court services across agencies and programs.

The Federation has joined with the Texas Medical Association in the Texas Pediatric Society to file written comments with DSHS about the latest draft of the H.B. 1023 mental health workforce report. DSHS has eliminated the recommendation that psychologists be granted prescribing authority, but the report has several other inadequacies that the Federation feels need to be addressed. Our expectation is that the final report will be issued in November for consideration by the Legislature when they convene in January.

Outgoing Lt. Governor David Dewhurst made additional committee chairmanship appointments in July. They include naming Sen. Jane Nelson to replace the departed Sen. Tommy Williams as chair of the Senate Finance Committee. Sen. Charles Schwertner, a Georgetown physician, was appointed to replace Sen. Nelson as chair of the Senate Health and Human Services Committee. Both of these appointments are welcome by the Federation.

State Rep. Brandon Creighton (R – Conroe) was elected to replace Sen. Tommy Williams in the Texas Senate in District 4 in a special election. Meanwhile, Sen. Robert Duncan has retired from the Texas Senate after more than 20 years to become the Chancellor of the Texas Tech University System. The Governor has called a special election for September 9 to find his replacement. State Rep. Charles Perry of Lubbock appears to be the early favorite, but there are six candidates in the race, and it may be too soon to tell how things shake out. A runoff is likely.

Lastly, State Rep. Lois Kolkhorst has announced that she will be seeking to fill the vacated seat of Sen. Glenn Hegar, who won the Republican nomination to be the state's Comptroller. No election has been called yet because Sen. Hegar will not vacate the seat until he is sworn in in January, assuming he wins the general election in November. Rep. Kolkhorst is the longtime chair of the House Public Health committee, and is very familiar with mental health issues. No other candidates have announced for the seat, but others are expected to join the fray.

As always, please feel free to contact the Federation with questions or concerns about any of these policy matters. We are working hard to represent your views at Texas Legislature and the various state agencies, and your feedback is always welcome.

ttendance at the TSCAP's 2014 Annual Meeting and Scientific Program in San Antonio on July 18-20, 2014 at the La Cantera Hill Country Resort set an all time record for the organization. Observations on the Current Healthcare Environment setting with only complex problems going to specialists.

Although the numbers are improving, there is still a substantial uninsured population (over 40 million persons, 15% of the population) that impacts public and private providers alike; and the lack of Medicaid expansion in states such as our own, complicates providing and paying for their care. Furthermore, our population is aging and becoming more expensive to treat; it is estimated that by 2030 the over-65 population will nearly double.

Fundamental changes in the way doctors practice, namely consolidation and integration, are already occurring and the rate is accelerating. Small practices continue to decline. Nationally, solo or two person practices have dropped from 41% to 19% over the last 25 years. According to a MGMA survey in 2012, 60% of all physicians were employed or managed by non-physician entities. An AMA survey last year revealed that only 40% of family practitioners surveyed were in private practice versus 85% in 1980. Merritt- Hawkins, the physician-recruiting agency, expects 75% of place-

Congratulations

Governor Rick Perry has appointed Michael Arambula M.D., Pharm.D., President of the Texas Medical Board, effective September 1, 2014. Dr. Arambula operates a private practice in General and Forensic Psychiatry and is an Adjunct Associate Professor of Psychiatry at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio. He is a member of the American Psychiatric Association Texas Society of Psychiatric Physicians, Bexar County Psychiatric Society, American Medical Association, Texas Medical Association, Bexar County Medical Society, American Academy of Psychiatry and Law, American Society of Law, Medicine and Ethics, and National Hispanic Medical Society, and a Fellow of the Federation of State Medical Boards, Additionally, Dr. Arambula is an Advisory Board Member of the Health Law and Policy Institute at The University of Houston College of Law. Previously he was Chairman of the TSPP Ethics Committee, President of the Bexar County Psychiatric Society and a gubernatorial appointee to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Office on Offenders with Medical and Mental Impairments. Dr. Arambula received his Bachelor of Science and Doctor of Pharmacy degrees from the University of Texas College of Pharmacy, and his medical degree from the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio.

ments this year to be for hospital employment. The greatest demand is for primary care physicians (and also Advanced Practice Nurses), while traditionally highly-compensated specialists such as anesthesiologists and radiologists have dropped off the charts. In other states, health insurers have purchased medical practices and networks, and there is a trend of for-profit hospitals taking over the non-profits.

In Texas there are now many employment opportunities for psychiatrists besides the traditional options of MHMRA, the VA, or academic settings. A 2012 TMA survey must be taken with a grain of salt since there were a relatively small number of responses from psychiatrists; still it found, as would be expected, that the vast majority of psychiatrists in private practice were in a solo practice, but that 67% of responding psychiatrists were employed by a non-physician entity versus 40% of non-psychiatric specialists. (Presumably, this disparity resulted from the fact that a large number of other specialists were employed by group medical practices.) Notably, it was found that 66% of psychiatrists were already then using an EHR or planning to purchase one.

Some healthcare organizations may not have incentives that are aligned with those of their employed physicians. Large hospital systems are under pressure because they have continued to make huge capital investments at a time when there is a shift away from inpatient services, reimbursement rates are decreasing, and there is a move toward capitation and bundled services. Nevertheless, they have purchased practices and hired physicians based on their productivity, which may actually increase medical costs over the short-term. Longer-term, will they favor arrangements that bolster provider salaries or reimbursement, or those that maintain rates for facility-based care? Likewise, organizations flush with grants and 1115 waiver money have built extensive provider networks at salaries that could not be supported by typical reimbursement for medical services. What happens if funding is reduced? Will physicians be required to see more patients per hour, supervise more extenders, or have reduced treatment options?

While trends in psychiatry tend to lag behind the rest of medicine, and perhaps change comes more slowly to Texas than other areas of the country, none of us are immune to the powerful forces at work. (If you were told a year ago that Congress would pass legislation to allow veterans to receive healthcare outside of the VA system or that Texas would consider privatizing a state psychiatric hospital, would you have believed it?) In all likelihood more and more psychiatrists, led by our younger peers, will be employed by or affiliated with larger healthcare systems. In this climate it will be increasingly difficult for the solo psychiatrist to participate in a fee for service model with healthcare organizations and insurers. Of course, there will always be a place for an independent cash practice, but most of us participate in and are dependent on commercial insurance plans and Medicare or Medicaid to some degree, either directly or through our employers or institutions. Besides, our patients pay a great deal of money for insurance coverage, and they generally expect to be able to use it.

How will we adapt to the new realities on the horizon? Who are our natural partners? Can psychiatrists maintain any control in these partnerships? As specialty providers, historically 'carved out' of general medicine, and representing a small percentage of the healthcare dollar, how do we exert any control over clinical options, formularies, or the scope of practice of physician extenders in a larger integrated system? There are no simple answers to these questions, but some practical suggestions may be beneficial as we sort things out. First and foremost, psychiatrists need to avoid passivity, and fight our natural tendency to work in isolation. Coming together and forming larger integrated psychiatric group practices is more likely to give us a place at the table. We must seek leadership roles in the governance and quality committees of our institutions and healthcare systems. It has long been known that psychiatric treatment reduces overall health costs; we should be up to the challenge of developing collaborative programs with our general medical colleagues that are effective and have measurable results.

Finally, the importance of TSPP's effective lobbying, public relations, and education activities, often in collaboration with TMA, cannot be underestimated in these tumultuous times. Our full participation in organized psychiatry is crucial to our goal of keeping the needs of our patients front and center, while helping to maintain our ability to provide appropriate care with fair compensation regardless of the setting or system.
